In a time of rapid geopolitical change, understanding the relationship between crises and international cooperation is essential. The International Relations and Diplomacy Conference brings together scholars, researchers, and experts to discuss the key challenges and opportunities shaping global politics and security. The conference will cover topics such as international relations, regional security, diplomacy, and security studies. A special panel will commemorate the 100th anniversary of Chile-Hungary diplomatic relations, reflecting on historical ties and contemporary cooperation. We welcome faculty members, researchers, and PhD students from Hungarian and international institutions to share their research and engage in dialogue.
