Sustainable Tourism as a Tool for Community Development

2019. november 22., péntek 14:30 (20 perc)

Technological advancement, low-cost airlines, better incomes, uncontrolled demand and concentration of tourism in specific sites create new risks to sustainable tourism like crowding, stress on locals, pressure on infrastructure, loss of biodiversity, climate change, or damage to touristic and archaeological sites. Sustainability requires coordination of efforts of stakeholders like local communities, tourists, business, government organizations etc. To rethink their current practices, we need to address such challenges of growing tourism and its negative impact with innovative solutions.
